

MISSION & VALUES PEOPLE PARTNERS REPORTS

Generations of Indigenous Australians in remote communities have lived a life impacted by poor health. This affects the whole community, especially young people. Red Dust believes that good health is the key to a bright future and that health outcomes can only be made possible through a two-way exchange with communities.

JOHN VAN GRONINGEN

FOUNDER

In 2006 John Van Groningen along with assistance from a range of friends and supporters, set up the framework to build our organisation Red Dust Role Models. John lived in the remote Indigenous community of Lajamanu, and understood the challenges and hurdles faced by people living in these areas of Australia. He created a unique program that saw elite athletes visiting remote communities and conducting sport and healthy lifestyle programs, and by 2006 it had evolved to become the successful entity that is Red Dust Role Models.

Sadly, on December 23, 2012 John passed away due to complications with his battle with cancer. John's passion for Red Dust's work in remote Indigenous communities was unwavering and we will continue to work hard to improve the health and well being of youth in remote communities in John's honour.
